It seems to me that if my well and those of my neighbors are not causing any problem by the way they were drilled and there is no evidence to that effect, the city of Meridian should have no right to restrict the rights of us outside the city and cause undue costs and restrictions. I am presently not having any problem with my well, but in the past I have had to repair it. These restrictions, as I understand it, would have made the cost of my well and the repairs much larger, causing a heavy burden on my family at that time. If those drilling methods and repairs did not then, and are now not causing a problem why should we now add that burden to our families and economy?
